the agency of forty-nine floats on which were grouped, turners, craftsmen, returned in keeping with the period they represented, the story of the development of the German nation and the part played by the German-Americans in the founding and up-building

The first section represented the German, as an American citizen, and portrays him as the soldier of the Revolutionary, as a student and lover of poetry, music and art and credited him with inspiring a like interest in us among the American people. A float entitled "Columbia and Germania," showed the two figures riding in the ship of state and another called "Music and Poetry," in which Fame with a laurel wreath proclaimed the glories of the German poets and composers. These were the first of and costumes, historically correct were worn, most of them having been imported directly from Germany. Thirteen groups of floats were used to more completely picture the story of the struggle against the Roman invaders and the rise of the Germans.

were represented. Another group depicted the war of liberation with the great elector, Frederick, as the central figure. Here was seen again Frederick Ludwig Jahn, as a youth with his turners, the first to answer to the call to arms. The signing of the peace pact at Versailles at the close of the German-French war of 1871 with the German kings surrounded by the famous diplomats of the day and the military geniuses Bismarck, Moeltke and the rest, was depicted true to life. Following this was a group in vivid contrast showing

As it is an established custom of all who participate in such pageants except those who form the pictures on the floats, to go afoot. In this division, grouped according to age, were the turner classes, both visiting and local. At the end of the pageant rode a group representing a body of 600

INTEREST DISPLAYED
IN THE NOVEL IDEAS

PRESENTED AT THE MONSTER
"SAFETY-FIRST" MEETING AT MYERS THEATRE LAST EVENING.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS

Northwestern Road. Fathers Idea to Make Lives of Workmen and Passengers Safer if Possible.

That the "Safety First" idea has become firmly entrenched in the minds of the northern Wisconsin
employees of the Northwestern railroad was fully demonstrated by the large crowd which packed the big "safety first" rally that the officials of the road held. Special trains had been sent out from Chicago enabling employees along the route to attend and the house was packed to its capacity.

G. W. Daily, superintendent of the Wisconsin division presided over the meeting and gave a short history of the "safety first" movement, how it was inaugurated three years ago and the progress it has made. He placed in charge of R. C. Richards, general claim agent, and by various methods
the idea of the conservation of human lives has produced miraculous results and attracted attention throughout the world.

When William D. Cantillon general manager of the entire Northwestern system was introduced he was greeted with applause showing his great popularity with his fellow employees.
Mr. Cantillon is a former resident of this city having received his early education here and rose to his responsible position after many years of service as a switchman and laborer in the local yards. Human life is more important than any other thing in this world, and yet we have very little regard for it, but instead the government passes laws and passes enormous expenditures for the conservation of forests and water power. It was the fundamental idea of Mr. Cantillion.

According to Mr. Cantillon there were 35,000 workmen killed and two million injured every year in the workshops of our country and one-sixteenth of these are railroad men. Death and permanent injuries not alone caused sorrow and hardship but decreased efficiency of the railroad in that if a trusted and educated workman is killed, it necessitates putting a green man in his place and this takes time.
The man has reached the state of perfection of the man he succeeded and the road is not in as high a state of operating power as it was before.

Mr. Cantillon also gave the complete history as to how the "safety first" idea was put into practice and how at the present time it has developed to such an extent that there are 700 on the different safety committees and every class of employees
has a voice in the rules and regulations that govern the railroad. The body of ten division officers, with R.
C. Richards as chairman, was appointed to supervise the work and all amendments solicited by the workmen are submitted to them for consideration.

Ralph C. Richards, general claim agent of the Northwestern railroad,
was the next speaker on the program,
and he stated that he had been an employee of the Northwestern railroad ever since he had been wearing short pants and, expected that he would work for them all his life unless the "safety first" committee did such good work on the various divisions
that there would be no further need for claim agents.

"That the American people were a bunch of chance takers and because of that one fact there is a man killed every sixteen minutes and one injured every sixteen seconds and that the workmen want prevention and not compensation," was brought out by the speaker.

Before giving his address on the right and wrong way of doing things on the railroads Mr. Richards spoke of the national crime of trespassing
and made a urgent plea that the citizens of this city make an earnest effort to their representatives to pass
better legislation protecting the railroad right-of-ways and in this way save the lives of nearly two hundred thousand people in the next twenty years.

"It's the little accidents we want to cure and if we do the big ones will take care of themselves," was the remark of the founder of the movement after showing the audience
the various ways in which the workmen, passengers and trespassers are killed and injured on the railroads.
Edward Smith, a veteran of the road who has been forty-two years in their employment was called upon for a speech and responded by telling of his boyhood acquaintance with Mr.
Cantillon.

Chas. James A. Fathers on behalf of the men gave a short speech endorsing and praising the success of the Northwestern in their crusade against accidents.

A. W. Smallen, general chairman of the "safety first" committee of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad was unable to be present at the meeting and that company's views on the subject were given by Thomas
S. Nolan, local attorney for the system.

Men representing the various classes of the work on the railroad were called upon to give their views and every one expressed confidence as to the success and future of the movement.

J. J. Dulin, a passenger train conductor operating from Janesville to Chicago stated that during last year
he had been in charge of 75,432 people
during the runs between his destination and he has always considered it his personal duty to see that every passenger was safely carried and that during his long service never had an accident simply because he thought that safety should come before speed.

R. Quayle, superintendent of the motive power machinery of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad praised such work as that of Mr.
Dulin and spoke of the fact that the matter how many rules and regulations the government and railroad passed it was the men who can make the movement a success by careful and prudent thinking.

and reduce the accidents to a minimum.
W. H. Coburn, a telegrapher and member of the northern Wisconsin division safety committee, spoke of his experience as to seeing the carelessness of the traveling public and expressed hope that a successful remedy would be found for it soon.
M. P. Thurber, superintendent of the Mineral Point and Prairie du Chien divisions of the St. Paul road was unable to be present and this was greatly regretted by the railroad men because of the great interest he has taken in the work for the St. Paul system for safety.

William Stocks, foreman of the Northwestern roundhouse at Janesville stated that all employees working in constant danger were inclined to become careless and as a result there were numerous accidents,
but since the company had taken precautions in guarding the dangerous machinery accidents at the round-houses were few and far between.

The engineers' view of the safety
first movement was given by William Gibson, who read a letter of instructions as to what the engineers should do as to insure a safe trip for the passengers.

The Wisconsin division safety committee, which is admitted to be the leading division in the matter of safety, held the entire system held a business meeting at 10 o'clock yesterday afternoon and their officials were given an excellent four course banquet in the new assembly room.
The officials present expressed themselves as being pleased with the large audience that attended and the enthusiasm shown.

NEW ELECTRIC HEADLIGHTS
TO BE INSTALLED AT ONCE

Eighteen new American electric headlights have been received by the St. Paul roundhouse here, and they will be installed on the local engines at once. The lights are the best that have been bought, the cost running up to about three hundred dollars apiece.
Besides the regular headlight, four "ab-light" will be installed in each engine, and run from the same power.
These lights must be installed by July 1st. The lights received by the local St. Paul roundhouse are the first to be installed on the St. Paul road between Chicago and Milwaukee.

WANT SCHOOLS TO GIVE
INSTRUCTION ON SAFETY

Railroad Representative Holds Conference With Supt. Euell in Regard to Matter.
Officials of the Chicago & Northwestern and Chicago, Milwaukee & St.
Paul roads are here to give a course of instruction in safety and prevention of accidents on railroads installed in the local schools. A representative of the safety first movement
met on Tuesday afternoon with Supt.
Euell to discuss the proposition which he present curriculum is rather prowided, safety instruction would be valuable and might be combined with some lessons in the matter of first aid in the case of drowning and other accidents, according to Mr. Euell.
There have been a number of Janesville children badly hurt in railroad accidents while the river has claimed a large toll. The companies would be willing to furnish equipment and man-uals.

AUTOMOBILE STRIKES BUGGY
WHEN DRIVER LOSES CONTROL

Mrs. William Kilmer and Daughter Fauline Escape Injury in Accident Near Elmhurst.
As the result of the driver losing control of his machine an automobile belonging to a Beloit man yesterday ran into and partially demolished a carriage occupied by William Kilmer and daughter, Fauline, residing on the Frances Willard farm. The accident occurred a short distance
this side of the Blind Institute. Mrs.
Kilmer and her daughter were thrown into the box of the buggy as the result of the impact of the collision but were not injured. The horse ran a short distance before being brought under control. Both vehicles were headed southward at the time and the carriage occupied by the Kilmers road, turned out so as to permit the automobile to pass. The driver of the latter accepted all responsibility for the accident and offered to settle for the damages to the carriage on the spot. His name has not been learned.

TWO WAGE MEASURES
BEFORE THE SENATE

Both Introduced by Senator Linley—
State Board of Health to License
Plumbing Inspectors.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 26.—Two bills relating to wages of employees were introduced in the senate last night by Senator Linley. One provides that all checks issued in payment of wages
shall be made payable to the bearer
unless the employee shall otherwise request. The other bill provides that time checks or paper issued in payment of wages shall show the net
amount due to the employee at the time they are issued, after all debts, claims and charges have been deducted.

Senator Burke first asked unanimous consent to introduce two bills of secondary importance which was granted.
With this concession as a precedent
Senator Linley made a similar request for his two bills, and they too were received. Then Senator Monk offered a bill and it was accepted. All will be referred to the calendar.

By a vote of 16 to 0 the senate last night passed the Skogmo bill appropriating $7,500 to send three representatives to the centennial celebration at Christiania, Norway, in 1914. It conferred in the Axel Johnson bill giving counties the privilege of adopting a system of biennial payment of taxes. The bill provides that counties adopting it shall collect taxes in January and July. Assemblyman
Gannon's bill giving the state board of health power to supervise and license plumbing inspectors was considered in 17 to 6. The senate also conferred in the Potts bill appropriating $50,000 for agricultural representatives to inspect farmers with given counties in the best methods of agriculture; the Richardson bill increasing the amount of compensation to be allowed for work done on highways, and the Mahon bill prohibiting the use of wooden cars between steel coaches on passenger trains.

The senate killed the Harbut bill prohibiting banks from accepting any compensation on loans greater than the rate of interest stipulated in the instrument evidencing the plan. It sent to third reading the Rosa bill providing for the inspection of hotels,
rooming houses, etc.

DISH WASHER

Revolving Blades Churn the Water
Through Rackful of Dishes.

What appears to be an effective form of dish washing machine has been invented by a New York man. A large round boiler rests on removable legs a few feet from the floor. In the bottom of this boiler is a series of revolving blades which are operated by turning a crank at the side. A large wire backet fits inside the boiler, resting on projections that keep it far enough above
the blades to allow them free movement.
Sizzling water is placed in the boiler and a basketful of dishes lowered into

it. The handle is then turned and the blades revolve and churn the water around through the dishes, cleaning them thoroughly without disturbing them in the least, so there is no danger of breakage. As much hotter water can be used in this machine than in washing by hand, the dishes are cleaned more thoroughly.

Pity the Poor Pirates.
Indeed, baseball is a funny proposition. Last fall the Pirates looked like the best little group or bevy of pill-tossers to be found in many a day's journey. They had everything. They seemed all set to kick holes in Most of 'em are heavyweights and welterweights, and there are represented some pretty speedy pugs. Who would like the job of umpiring a game for this collection? No, indeed, we'd rather be a coward than a corpse.

The track, he would have lowered the state record by several seconds. The track was really too dusty for racing, despite the fact that two sprinkling wagons were kept busy all night and up to noon. On the turns, the drivers carried the dust with them in rolls, and they could not be seen again until they had driven a good ways around the course.

A well defined area of low pressure is central over the Southern Plateau region and pressures are low throughout the west and northwest. The progress eastward of this area of low pressure is marked by heavy rains in the upper Mississippi valley, the Missouri valley and the northern Rocky mountain region. Pressures are rising over the provinces of Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba and are falling in western Canada. An area of high pressure is over the North Atlantic and fair weather with rising temperatures prevails throughout the South Atlantic and Gulf states.

LACK OF CONFIDENCE.

The absence of one hundred and twenty-five congressmen, from the joint session, when President Wilson delivered his currency message, the other day, indicates a lack of confidence in Mr. Wilson's ability to deal with the question, to say the least. This feeling is widespread, and shared by other nations as well, as will be seen by the following criticism from the National Gazette of Berlin, Germany.

It says the dispatches should wake up Germany to the fact that while Europe is quarreling over the Balkans as if the fate of the world depended thereon, the chosen leader of the young giant nation, which lets its power be felt everywhere and has already more than once dictated the industrial fate of Europe, swings in his mighty hand a bludgeon against the established order of things upon which still rests the feeling of security in the present confusing uneasiness of these times of crisis.

The paper characterizes President Wilson's address as a demagogic message and a fanatical attack on the concentration of capital.

"As if it were not sufficient for Col. Roosevelt to have resorted to demagoguery," it continues, "it turns out that President Wilson is a professional socialist, and an American edition of that which counts nothing good."

"President Wilson is not an intellectual giant. He will break no new road for silence, not even a small path, yet fate has placed in his hand a power which no professor or no professional socialist ever had. Nowhere else is there such a personal regime government as in the United States.

"With a full realization of his power, President Wilson has determined to carry out his fanatical ideas. No one but a professor would venture on so hazardous a step. In Washington there is a real spectacle of a professor placing the entire people into a retort to experiment for the weal or woe of one of the most powerful nations of the world. The danger would not be so great if the United States alone were concerned. Unfortunately, however, there is much more at stake than the future of the United States. Germany's most powerful competitor."

As time passes the fact becomes more and more apparent that the new president is a demagogic charlatan, and while his honesty and sincerity is above question, he lacks the ability to deal with the great questions which have to do with national life.

The criticism of the German paper may seem a little severe, but Germany is good authority on socialism as the nation has long had the opportunity to study the question at close range. The American people are flattered with this dangerous doctrine, is apparent to every observer.

National banking is a big problem and the currency question is too important for theoretical experiments. Congress is not a school room and the president may discover in time that its members very naturally resent school boy treatment.

FINDING THE SUCKER.

The following story is going the round of the press and it is so suggestive of conditions that exist, that it is well worth relating. It is an old saying that "a sucker is born every minute," and the estimate is not very wide of the mark.

"I asked a patent lawyer of long experience and unusual candor what he thought about patents in general, and he told me this story:

"One time a man with an invention brought it to me to get it patented. I looked it up and advised him not to do it. It would cost him $60 to start his proceeding, and nobody could say how much to finish it; and the device would be worth nothing anyhow. He was immovable. At length I took his money and got the patent pushed up to the point of actual issue; then I begged him once more not to take it out. But he insisted, paid the fee and took it.

"He was seedy, hard up and out at the elbows. I felt criminal, but forgot it. Three years afterward I was in his town, and he came down to see me, driving to my hotel in a huge auto. He looked ready money all over.

"You're the man that started me on the road to fortune," he said. "I came to thank you."

"I gasped and asked him to explain."

"Well," he said, "you recollect that patent you got for me."

"Yes," I said "I remember it very well."

"And how you told me it was perfectly worthless?"

"Well," he went on, "you 'convinced me that it was worthless; but you didn't convince me that I didn't want it. I took it out, sold it to a man in Illinois for $3,000, and with the money bought a drug-store. The drug-store prospered, and I became a wholesaler. Then I set up in 'he patent medicine business, and now I'm here to thank you for what you've done for me."

"What became of the fellow who paid you the $3,000 for the patent?" I finally managed to ask.

"Oh," he replied, "he was the sucker. You thought I was, but you were wrong."

"Now," continued the patent expert, "that story represents the commonest and most effective way of making money out of patents. It may be knocking my own game, but it's the truth."

"I have watched the romance and the tragedy of the Patent Office for a number of years—and the place is full of both,—with the result that I fully concur in this advice. Don't take very seriously any advice that your device has 'fortune in it'."

ANOTHER BALKAN WAR.

Even if the influence of the great powers proves sufficient to prevent war this summer between Bulgaria on one side and Serbia, Greece and probably Montenegro on the other, the feeling shown by the three smaller states against the formidable Bulgars is likely to cause serious trouble not far in the future.

There will probably be another bloody struggle in the Balkan region before a permanent adjustment of international rivalries and claims will be possible. Roumania, although neutral in the recent war between the four allies and the Ottoman empire, is sure to side against Bulgaria when the time comes to determine the limits of that country, and it is probable that the Roumanian government would be willing to set its army in motion to support the Serbs and the Greeks against the Bulgars.

Like the smaller states which have been Bulgaria's allies in overcoming the Turks, Roumania is fearful of the possible consequences of Bulgarian gains and expansion.

The whole situation is made critical and discouraging by the deep-seated jealousies and old differences between the Balkan nations. The danger of war is due more to the feeling of the masses than to the disputes of rulers.

One alliance, crowned with victory against a common foe, is not enough. It appears, to the contrary, that hostility bred by generations of suspicion and conflicting ambitions.

There is lots of talk relative to the new bridge across the Rock river and the right to rebuild the structures destroyed by the fire of April 1. Public sentiment is against the rebuilding of the stores along the bridge, but it is a legal question that will have to be decided, and unfortunately can not be put out to popular vote.

Meanwhile, the vote for the erection of the new bridge at the election July 8th, so work can begin at once.

July is a hot time to talk politics, but apparently there is going to be much discussion within the next few days after the Fourth. There is the primary for the mayoralty first, then the election later. The issue is just the same as it was last winter when the trouble first began, and by this time the people understand it thoroughly.

Next comes the Fourth of July. Step lively, please, and everyone make the plans for the day, according to their disposition. There will be races at the track, Edgerton will celebrate, and Beloit is also on the list with a big blow-out. The river is enticing; the lake not so far away. Plenty of places to go and plenty to do.

These are the days that dog-owners should take care of their pets, see that they have plenty of water to drink, and do not become over-heated. Hot weather is bad for animals and babies and while the babies have their mothers' watchful eyes, the dog-owners should look after their pets.

If anyone complained of the cold spring they have nothing to say now because the weather is a trifle warm and sultry.

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.

GASPARD DE COLIGNY.

We hear little nowadays of the leader of the French Huguenots who, though in high position, espoused a despised cause, made several ineffectual attempts to colonize America, practically won the battle for religious liberty in his own land and lost his life in the dreadful massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Admiral Coligny had little to do with the French navy, but was one of the stoutest soldiers his nation ever knew. He was of those rare and noble old characters who stood high both with the court and common people. He reformed the army in much the same way that Cromwell afterward reformed that of England. He drove out low forms of debauchery and immorality, inculcated a religious spirit, made the soldiers respect the rights and property of private citizens and disciplined his forces in a way that became a model to the nation for years to come.

Coligny's character was so high that he had the genuine respect of all factions, although partisan rancor was so fierce that it was well nigh impossible for one side to do justice to the other. His integrity was worth a regiment of soldiers. His own men loved and trusted as much as the opposition feared and hated him.

Had the French been as good colonists as the English Coligny would probably have planted strong colonies of Huguenots in America that might have had an influence on the subsequent history of the United States similar to that exerted by the British puritans. That the plan failed was not his fault. He had the vision and took the necessary steps toward its fulfillment.

There is no better reading in the world than the biographies of noble men and women, and of them all there are few who bear scrutiny better than this great hearted French soldier who sacrificed throughout his life for a righteous but unpopular cause, who was greater in defeat than victory, who won against overwhelming odds and who in the end took his place among the martyrs.

His blood was not shed in vain, for indirectly the French revolution was a long delayed answer to St. Bartholomew.

TOY FIGURE BLANK

Has Front and Back of Figure and Feet Bend to Stand On.

An ingenious variation of the paper doll and other toy figure ideas has been evolved by a Maryland woman. Most paper figures are printed on one side only, but in this invention both front and back views are given. The different views are printed side by side on sheets of paper which fold together and bring the pictures in the proper relation. The inner sides of the paper are gummed and by moistening the gum they can be pasted together to form one stiff sheet.

Happy Voices of Furnace Experience

"I heated my home at the rate of about $6 per month against $14.50 per month last winter. It makes no difference what the weather is, we have the heat just as we want it."

Geo. H. Ferry, 182 Ninth Ave., Grand Rapids, Mich., thus relates his 1908 cold weather experience with the

Peck Williamson Underfeed Furnace

From Maine to Oregon this Michigan man's experience has been duplicated thousands of times. The Underfeed is a modern furnace which

Saves 1/2 to 3/4 of Coal Bills

The Underfeed requires less attention than a topfeed; gets as much clean, even heat out of cheapest slack as highest grade anthracite. Fuel is easily pumped from below and as all fire is on top, smoke and gases are consumed. No clinkers and very few ashes.

TWENTY-ONE CASES OF TUBERCULOSIS

That Number of Patients Found in Janesville—Visiting Nurse Doing Much to Asest Them.

Janesville has twenty-one cases of tuberculosis of which seventeen are of the pulmonary form according to the statistics published by the government. This report shows that Wisconsin has the third-lowest death rate from tuberculosis of any state in the union. Its rate is 103.88 per 100,000 inhabitants, the only state surpassing it, record being Utah 46.7, and Michigan 96.7. The total number of deaths from pulmonary tuberculosis in Wisconsin in 1911 was 2,076; from tuberculosis meningitis 128; from tuberculosis of the lungs 245; Beloit and Wausau with eighteen cases each, are tied for the lowest total of cities in their class. Tubercular patients in this city are getting in no small measure from the efforts of the visiting nurse, Agnes Anderson, the visiting nurse. She makes regular calls upon all of them, gives them treatments, makes frequent examinations to determine their condition, administers valuable instructions to the family and in and in precautions against the spread of contagion to those who occupy the same house with them. Where they are in need she procures such articles of food or clothing required. These it should be understood come from private charity. The Associated Charities maintains a fund for the purchase of milk and eggs for needy tubercular patients and this requires donations from time to time. But very recently a cook stove was provided for a poverty-stricken family that was deprived of one through the collapse of their own. Those who need tubercular can learn in what ways they may help by conferring with the Visiting Nurse.

INTERPRETS SALOON LICENSE STATUTES

Attorney General W. C. Owen Submits Deductions for Guidance of Officials Granting Them.

On account of the confusion existing in the minds of officials charged with the duty of granting saloon licenses, concerning the number of saloons which can be licensed in municipalities, wherein the number of saloons on July 1, 1907, exceeded one for each 250 people, Attorney General W. C. Owen has submitted the following deductions for their guidance:

(1) Saloons on July 1, 1907, may be continued to be licensed for such purpose at the same location.

(2) If the owner of premises refused to accept a saloon license at that place, then the person engaged in such business at such place July 1, 1907, may be licensed to run a saloon at another location.

(3) As long as the owner of premises on which a saloon was located July 1, 1907, is willing to rent or himself use the same for saloon purposes, the licensee can not be licensed to run a saloon at a location not used for saloon purposes July 1, 1907.

(4) The owner of premises upon which a saloon was run July 1, 1907, may continue the use of such premises for saloon purposes, running the saloon himself or renting it to others.

(5) If the saloon is run by a renter on July 1, 1907, and such renter abandons the saloon business, the owner of the premises may rent the same to another who may be licensed to run a saloon at that place.

(6) If the owner of a premises was himself running a saloon July 1, 1907, he may drop out of the business and lease the premises to another who may be licensed to run a saloon at that location.

(7) He may likewise convey the premises to another and the business may be continued by such grantee or the licensee of such grantee.

(8) If a saloon is licensed to a saloon licensee where the number of saloons exceeds the ratio limit, he must either (a) have been in business July 1, 1907, and continuously ever since, or (b) have been a licensee used for such purposes July 1, 1907, and continuously ever since.

(9) When a location used for saloon purposes July 1, 1907, has been abandoned for such purposes, the privilege secured to it by section 15565 is forfeited.

(10) Likewise, when a person in the saloon business July 1, 1907, drops out of such business, he forfeits the right secured to him by said section.

(11) When a municipality votes "wet" after having been "dry," no more than one saloon to each 250 population may be licensed.

TO RUSH DECISION ON BRIDGE MATTER

Testimony Taken Yesterday Will be Transcribed and Presented to Governor Immediately.

Testimony taken in regard to the Milwaukee Street bridge and the buildings abutting upon it, before Secretary L. E. Gettle, secretary of the state railroad commission, at the city hall council chamber yesterday, will be transcribed as soon as possible and presented to the governor according to Mr. Gettle. The executive will then decide whether the attorney general shall start prosecution against any of the property owners on the bridge on the ground that they are obstructing a navigable stream.

The city's interest in the case is confined to the westerly abutment of the proposed new bridge which will be twenty feet east of the present abutment according to the present plans and specifications. The proposed abutment will be on a line with the wall of the Jeffris building which, as it was brought out at the hearing yesterday, will cross the river boundary as determined by City Engineer Ker on order of the common council in 1906. The abutment will also be on this river boundary line and will make the new bridge twenty feet shorter than the present structure thereby affecting a considerable saving in the city in the matter of construction cost. The space between the old and new abutments will be filled with earth.

It is not probable that work on the bridge which cannot be started before the first of August will be in any way delayed by the litigation but it was thought best that an appearance be made in behalf of the city.

Electric Resistance of Trees.
The electric resistance of trees is quite great, a quality which protects them to a considerable degree from lightning stroke. This resistance varies greatly with the character of the tissues and also with the temperature. This fact results in an annual and daily period in resistance. The cambium layer shows the least electrical resistance, followed by the phloem and sapwood.

WOMAN ESCAPES OPERATION

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Here is her own statement.

Cary, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Cary, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

The Argyle Case

A Novelization by J. W. McConaughy of the Successful New Play by Harriet Ford, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Detective William J. Burns, in Which Robert Hilliard Is Appearing : : :

Copyright, 1912, by Journal-American-Examiner.

"Well, in this way. It has become practically necessary that Miss Mazuret should be protected from the persecutions of reporters and photographers, and even the comments of intimate friends. She is at the point of breaking down."—Mrs. Martin made an inaudible exclamation of sympathy "and you know even an innocent woman will do things to implicate herself if she's strained beyond the limit of her strength."

"Yes, yes—of course!" exclaimed Mrs. Martin in a low, tense voice. "But she is so watched," continued Kayton, "that it is impossible for us to get her away anywhere without its being known. More than that, we have arrived at a point where it is necessary for our purposes to make the real criminal confident that we are off his trail. To be frank with you," he added, "we suspect a former member of the household."

"Indeed!" murmured his visitor. Kayton paused for a moment, as if to let this much sink in and settle itself, and then went on. "We want Miss Mazuret to disappear," he declared, "and to disappear so completely that even a member of her own household will not suspect that we have anything to do with it. Any flight by train would be instantly found out. It must be secret and sensational. Her closest friends must be in a state of the greatest alarm. Do you follow me?"

"Yes, yes; but"—stammered Mrs. Martin. Kayton paid no attention to the doubtful, hesitating manner of the affirmative. He apparently took it for granted that Mrs. Martin was willing and almost eager to co-operate.

"Well, then, see for yourself, Mrs. Martin," he said, "that you are in just the right position to help us. Your relations with the family are absolutely unknown. I am sure I could trust to your discretion. No one connected with her would ever connect her with you, and you can receive her, without explanation to anybody, as a total stranger into one of your furnished rooms."

His visitor looked almost alarmed. "Well, Mr. Kayton," she said desperately, "that's something I wouldn't like to undertake without some—"

"Why not?" he interrupted sharply. "All I ask is secrecy."

Mrs. Martin moistened her lips. "When did you want her to come?" she asked faintly.

"Now."

"Now!" echoed the woman in dismay. "Right away?"

Kayton nodded. "She is here—waiting to see you."

"Here?" exclaimed Mrs. Martin, rising. "She's here? I am to see her?"

"Yes, at once," replied Kayton without seeming to notice her emotion. "I would like to arrange it so she could go home with you now. I'll see her first and explain everything." He pressed a button on his desk, and Manning appeared.

"Joe, will you give Mrs. Martin a chair in the outer office—the little office—see that she isn't disturbed?"

"Yes, sir."

"I won't be long, Mrs. Martin," Kayton assured her, and like one in a dream, she started to follow Manning out. But after a few steps she hesitated and stopped.

"Mr. Kayton," she said, with more firmness than she had lately exhibited, "you know I came here confidentially. I didn't expect to meet any of these people, and it would be very inconvenient if—Miss Mazuret should by any chance hear my name—as mentioned in the will."

"Is there any one that she could hear it from except yourself?" asked Kayton keenly.

"No, oh, no!" was the hasty protest. "Mrs. Martin," he said gravely, "your intercourse with Miss Mazuret can be just as formal as you choose to make it."

He nodded in a manner that indicated that the discussion was over, and almost against her will she obediently followed Manning out of the room. When she had gone Kayton summoned his manager and handed him the card she had given him.

"Leischmann, put Nash in charge of men to start on this house right away," he directed. "Get a room near enough to take wires from the telephone. Have them run out to everybody that connects with the place. Tell them to go slow and keep under cover."

"Yes, sir," said the manager. And he hurried out as Manning returned.

"Joe, be careful with that woman," ordered Kayton.

"Is it the mother?" asked Manning eagerly.

Kayton granted. "Can't you see the family in the face?"

"Gee!" exclaimed the young man, wriggling with delight.

Kayton went to the door of the little office, where Miss Mazuret was concealed, and invited her to come in.

"Miss Mazuret," he said abruptly, as she turned on him an inquiring look, "I have found a woman who was in the room when Mr. Argyle was killed."

Miss Mazuret turned white as chalk. "A woman?" she gasped.

Kayton nodded grimly. "I have absolute proof of it here in her finger prints."

He led her to his desk and pointed to the blotter, beside which lay one of the photographic records of the finger prints on the table in the Argyle library. Even to the girl's untrained eye they were identical.

"Oh," she gasped, "we must tell Bruce."

"Not yet," returned Kayton decidedly. "Now listen to me." He looked down into the girl's eyes. Her bosom

"How?" she asked breathlessly.

was still telling its tale of the effect of his announcement, but the eyes were calm and courageous—the eyes of a brave and loyal woman.

"I have no reason for thinking that this woman committed the murder," he said slowly. "She may be as innocent as Bruce himself and as much a victim of appearances. But she knows who did it, and we must find out through her."

The girl followed every word. "How?" she asked breathlessly.

"I'm going to ask you to do something that will take all your courage," Miss Mazuret said nothing. She only looked. Kayton nodded approvingly.

"And I know I can rely on you," he said. "Even to the extent of making this whole investigation depend on you."

The girl drew a long breath, but she was calm and collected.

"What can I do?" she asked.

"The people who are responsible for the death of Mr. Argyle," explained Kayton slowly, "are all, as we say, under cover. They're keeping away from each other. And even if we had all of them separately under surveillance, no amount of shadowing would connect them with each other or with the crime. We must put them off their guard. Do you understand?"

"Yes—yes," said the girl eagerly.

Kayton proceeded even more slowly. "We must do something at once to confirm all of these suspicions against you. We must make it appear that you have practically admitted your guilt."

"How?" asked Miss Mazuret, without wincing.

"By flight," he replied. "I want you to disappear."

"Disappear?" echoed the girl.

"This woman's name," he went on, tapping the finger-marked blotter, "is Mrs. Martin. She keeps a furnished room house. I have told her that we wish you to disappear, and there are reasons why she has consented to take you as a lodger secretly."

The girl could not restrain a gesture of repugnance.

"You understand me, Miss Mazuret," went on Kayton swiftly. "We must gain access to this house without arousing suspicion, and we can do it through you. I can visit you there myself. My men can come. You'll have nothing to fear. You'll be protected every moment. Some of my operatives will be in sight of your window every minute of the day and night. You must go away without letting Bruce or Mrs. Wyatt or your maid—any one, in fact—know where you are. Will you trust me enough," he asked with some hesitation, "to let me involve you this way publicly, and then clear you when we find the real criminal?"

Again the girl drew in a long breath and looked long in his face before she replied, and then she said softly:

"Yes."

Kayton flushed and dropped his eyes. "I want you to believe that I would never let you do it," he said earnestly. "If I weren't absolutely sure that you would be absolutely safe and that I can clear you later."

"Don't think about that," she said bravely. "I'll do anything you say."

"Thank you," he said, and his voice quavered slightly. "Mrs. Martin is here. Will you go now?"

The girl shivered slightly and a frightened look leaped to her eyes, but passed in an instant.

"Yes," she replied. "I will go."

He pressed a button and Joe Manning slipped into the room.

"Joe, bring Mrs. Martin in. Have you plenty of money with you?" he asked in a low voice.

"Yes," returned the girl in the same tone. Then suddenly with a little shiver. "Oh, I dread to meet her."

Kayton looked at her in curious wise for a moment or two.

"I must ask you," he said coldly, "to show no feeling of repulsion for this woman."

"I won't; I won't," Miss Mazuret assured him under her breath as Mrs. Martin slowly walked into the office.

Mary gripped the top of a chair by which she was standing and waited, rigid and erect. The woman entered almost reluctantly, stopped and gazed at the girl with a mixture of dread, curiosity and something else.

"Mrs. Martin," said Kayton in casual, matter of fact tones, "this is Miss Mazuret."

He resumed his seat at his desk and bent over his papers. The girl looked at the woman and smiled slightly. The woman looked at the girl and moved slowly over to her and held out her hand.

"My dear," she said gently, "will you come with me?"

CHAPTER XI.
The Counterfeiter's Den.

THE neighborhood of Washington square, like one or two other older sections of New York, is essentially medieval.

Individualism is its most salient characteristic. Even the many who live there to think thoughts of social brotherhood insist on adhering to their own particular thoughts, and thus, as in the middle ages, when a man enters his dwelling and bars the door he is free of all danger that his neighbors may intrude on his privacy.

Mrs. Martin recognized that this community was the ideal one for her the glass of medicine down, leaned her head on her hands and "played" that she was crying.

A moment passed and the tender-hearted Teddy, unable longer to bear the sight of his mother's stricken attitude, inquired: "What's the matter, mother, dear?"

Without removing her hands from her eyes, she replied: "I'm grieved that my son won't take his castor oil for me."

Whereupon Teddy sat up in bed and offered consolingly: "Oh, I wouldn't feel badly if I were you, mother, dear. Father will be home soon and he'll make me take it."

A man riding on the front platform of a downtown horse car in a city where horse cars still run noticed standing beside him a tired looking fisherman who held a heavy bundle on his shoulder.

"Why don't you set that bundle down?" asked the gentleman.

"Sure," said the Celt, "these poor horses have all they can do to drag the car and the pay-me. Oh, I'll carry the bundle."

Far Off.
Some day somebody will invent a law to prevent hard times. But by that time everybody will be comfortably well fixed.

rooming house." No one would or could inquire as to the character or occupations of her roomers. No one cared. Beyond a little printed sign above the bell pull that protruded from the dingy brick wall by the door she made no effort to secure lodgers. The few who came were told that the house was full. She had three lodgers—all men. These three came when she took the house and remained always. No new lodgers were added to their number and these never left her house.

They occupied rooms on the second floor. It was a two story and attic house, with a dining room and kitchen in the basement. They were not often in each other's rooms, but they met frequently in the garret, which was scantily but innocently furnished. But by the manipulation of certain boards in the floor and sliding panels at the backs of closets and cupboards these men could instantly avail themselves of the tools for a printing trade industry that is most severely frowned upon by the treasurer of the United States.

But that there was no possible occasion for her to appear in the upper rooms of the house, Mrs. Martin would never have consented that Miss Mazuret should become a lodger. She had a back parlor bedroom on the first floor in which she lodged the girl and felt that she was as much out of the way as if she had been in a Broadway hotel.

Immediately thereafter events moved with great swiftness. An organ grinder began haunting the block at all hours of the day and night. There was a new man at the newsstand on the corner across the street. The saloons at either end of the block began to do a surprisingly good business and the attic of the house next door to Mrs. Martin's was rented by a couple of inventors who wanted to work secretly on a new electrical appliance that would make a stir in the world. This new appliance was the photograph, the greatest of eavesdroppers, which has already made a considerable stir in various quarters of the United States.

Dinner Stories

During a recent slight illness the five-year-old Teddy, usually so amiable, flaily and obstinately refused to take his medicine. After a somewhat prolonged and ineffectual argument with him his mother at last said:

"What's the matter, mother, dear?"

Without removing her hands from her eyes, she replied: "I'm grieved that my son won't take his castor oil for me."

Whereupon Teddy sat up in bed and offered consolingly: "Oh, I wouldn't feel badly if I were you, mother, dear. Father will be home
